Following the issue of Monotheism of Actions, there is an important question that is whether Divine foreknowledge and human free will are compatible or not? Ash'arites who believed in the incompatibility of foreknowledge and human free will, could not find a meaning for man's agency in order not to understand the compulsion. They believed that Divine foreknowledge is absolutely the reason and cause of everything including the man's actions. Among this the works of Fakhr Razi are more visible, that in this writing, one of his reasons has been studied. Next seven results have been narrated and studied. Some results in western and Islamic traditions are common. Finally considering the other two consequences, a solution was suggested and clarified.
